Key aspects of burn wound management

Vicky Edwards provides an overview of the aspects of burn wound management that all clinicians should be familiar with – from initial assessment and management, to referral to specialist burn services

Developing a burns link nurse framework for minor burn management

Jacky Edwards describes the development of a burns link nurse framework, and how the “train-the-trainer” model was used to circumvent inappropriate referrals

The impact of psychological distress on the healing of burns

Julie Wisely examines the importance of psychological influences on the wound healing process, and the potential for psychological interventions to lessen patients’ distress and improve outcomes

Reducing the impact of hypertrophic scarring

Clare McGrory explores how early and ongoing scar assessment and suitable management is important in achieving positive outcomes for those patients with, or at risk of, hypertrophic scarring following burn wound healing
